It is my understanding that as part of the review consideration is being given to deregulate the postal service so that competitions will be the only controlling force in regulating the industry.

Opening up the delivery of mail to unregulated free enterprise will result in a postal service as it existed in the Middle-aged. That is, only rich people could afford to send material and it was nearly impossible to have material delivered to certain places.

For these reasons it is desirable to create a strong single system of mail delivery and free enterprise can make its profits in other spheres.
