

To whom may concern,

My name is Larry. I have a business selling computer accessories online. About 35% of my customers are from rural. I am concern that if postal service deregulated mean eventually i have to pay more if postage will increase for rural. Also, I personally think Canada should not deregulated until country with comparable size such as China and US did it. I am affard if postal deregulated mean more tax have to pay from us and large part of the profit from Canada post will shift to private corporation. Also, many mailman will loss their jobs like those auto workers. Finally, why should we open the market for a service eventually will replace by internet. Nowaday, i receive mostly junk mail anyway. So, is that mean i can get the same junk mail from different carrier or more junk mails from different carrier. Isn't Canada moving toward enviroment friendly? If we are enviornment friendly, we should ask people to send their bills and advertise through internet than open more carriers for junk mail. Also we don't need more trucks on the street.

Your truely,

Larry Lee
Ontario