

I strongly believe that Canadians from all abroad deserve a universal postal service. Canada Post is one of the few true Canadian institutions that still exist today and should be preserved at all costs, it has become part of our heritage.

Deregulation and privatization would only benefit the competition and would in turn cause massive job losses that will definitely hurt our economy. As long as Canada Post remains self-sufficient as a crown corporation and competitive in the market place there is no need to drastically change anything. Sincerely Kevin Miraldo
