

What is our Canada Post Corporation planning next? The closure of any Postal Offices is a cause for concern. Too often Government Corporations make changes to Canadian Lifestyle without consultation or concern as to the effect on a community or the people of the communities being served. I am the former President of Rural Dignity New Brunswick. We fought a courageous battle to retain Postal Service in Rural Areas of New Brunswick, but we could not stop some losses. Some Rural communities are served by a group box, which can not answer questions, sell stamps or simple help when our postal employee spots a missing postal code or insufficient postage before accepting an item to be sent through Canada Post. I live in Rural New Brunswick. I have roadside delivery and I have a Postal Office less than three kilometre away. My family frequently takes advantage of this convenience instead of driving ten Kilometres to St. Stephen to mail our items to be mailed. Deregulation and closures are not welcome.

Canada Post Corporation needs a new plan. Canada Post Corporation must review the services being provided and improve not close offices but bring the Canada Post Corporation out of the twentieth century to the twenty-first century with the advent of modern technology one would hope Canada Post would be a leader. In Canada, the cities, the towns and the rural areas of our Great Country, Canada; we, the citizens need a postal service for the people no matter where they live. Use consultation instead of accounting practices. Canada Post Corporation may deregulate itself out of business or close all post offices and we will not need a CANADA POST CORPORATION.
